Barbaresco

The Barbaresco wine, made in the province of Cuneo within the Barbaresco DOCG region, is divided into several key crus, or specific vineyard sites. Notable areas within Barbaresco include the villages of Neive, Novi Ligure, and Treiso. These wines typically offer floral aromas, red fruit flavours, and earthy undertones, with firm tannins and vibrant acidity.

BAROLO – THE KING OF ITALY

Barolo- Comune di Barolo

Situated on a high plateau surrounded by vine-covered hills, Barolo's soils are primarily grayish-blue marls from the Tortonian age, known as Sant'Agata Fossili marls. The wines from Barolo are aromatic and elegant, often described as having notes of tar and roses. These wines age exceptionally well but are also quite approachable in younger vintages.

Barolo - La Morra

Located on the western slopes of the Barolo region, La Morra's vineyards are planted in calcareous clay soils rich in magnesium and manganese. The wines from La Morra are known for their elegance and finesse, with delicate floral aromas and soft tannins. These wines are often approachable in their youth but have the potential to develop further with aging.

Barolo - Castiglione Falletto

Centrally located in the Barolo region, features Helvetian soils composed mainly of iron-rich sandstone and sand, dating back 11.6 to 13.8 million years. These soils, combined with the area's calcareous marl and favourable sun exposure, yield Nebbiolo wines that balance the elegance and aromatics of Barolo with the structure of Serralunga d'Alba.

Barolo - Serralunga d'Alba

Nestled on the southern slopes of the Barolo region, Serralunga d'Alba is characterized by soils rich in sand, limestone, and iron. The wines from Serralunga are powerful and tannic, with deep, complex flavors often displaying notes of dark fruit, spices, and earth. These wines have great aging potential and typically require extended cellaring to reach their full expression.

MONTALCINO – THE NOBILITY OF SANGIOVESE

Rosso di Montalcino

Rosso di Montalcino is crafted entirely from Sangiovese grapes, the same varietal used for Brunello di Montalcino. However, it is designed for earlier consumption, offering a fresher and more approachable profile. The aging process is shorter, with wines released after a minimum of 14 months, including at least one year in wooden barrels. This results in a vibrant wine with lively fruit flavours and moderate tannins

Brunello di Montalcino

Brunello di Montalcino represents the pinnacle of Montalcino's winemaking, exclusively using Sangiovese Grosso grapes. These wines undergo a mandatory aging period of at least five years before release, with a minimum of two years in cask or barrel. This extended maturation imparts depth, complexity, and the ability to age gracefully over decades. Brunello di Montalcino is renowned for its rich flavours of dark fruit, earth, and spices, accompanied by firm tannins and balanced acidity.

Brunello di Montalcino – “Cru”

The concept of "Cru" in Montalcino pertains to single-vineyard or single-estate wines that express the unique characteristics of specific sites within the region. These wines are crafted from grapes sourced from plots, showcasing the influence of terroir on flavour and structure.

Brunello di Montalcino – Gran Riserva

Grand Riserva Montalcino or simply 'Riserva' refers to Brunello wines that have undergone extended aging, typically spending at least six years maturing before their release. This prolonged aging process enhances the wine's complexity, allowing for the development of nuanced flavours and a more refined texture. Riserva wines are often sourced from single-vineyard sites, where specific terroirs contribute unique characteristics.
